

ûihyôngje / Secret Reunion

Synopsis

Also known as "Brothers" or "Blood Brothers".

North Korean secret agent Ji-won (Kang Dong-won) is under cover in Seoul. He waits for his last mission to come to go back to the North and meet his wife and daughter. He is assigned to meet a chief spy who came to the South and help him kill a traitor. The National Intelligence Service (NIS) led by Han-gyu (Song Kang-ho) intervenes, and a shooting rampage ensues in the heart of Seoul. Many men are killed or injured. For the incident, Han-gyu is fired and Ji-won is deserted by his agency. Six years later, Han-gyu, whose wife has left him with his daughter for an English husband, works as a private inspector, mainly finding illegal migrants and foreign spouses who run away. Ji-won works in a construction factory with a lot of Vietnamese workers. The two meet by chance at the factory and start a business partnership in order to steal information from the other. They live together and the distrust is hardly hidden on both sides. They learn to know each other despite several fights. Han-gyu learns about Ji-won's secret wish to make his family come to the South. One day during the ceremony they hold at home for Chuseok to their ancestors, Han-gyu reveals that he knows everything about Ji-won. But there is an issue with the missile launching by the North. The chief North Korean spy is due to come to kill another traitor. This is supposed to be the last mission for Ji-won. He has no choice or he would be also killed. He follows the chief spy. Joined soon by Han-gyu because he had put a small tracking chip on him a while ago. Ji-won pretends to kill Han-gyu. Han-gyu is able at the last minute to stand up and push the chief spy and Ji-won at the time the former was going to be killed. They fall from the building, Han-gyu comes and kills the chief spy. Ji-won is saved. Later, Han-gyu receives a plane ticket to go to London to see his daughter by Ji-won who said he is going to settle down with his family. Han-gyu takes the plane and discovers in the cabin Ji-won and his family...
